

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A portable telephone has a readable and writable internal memory unit, a readable, writable, and detachable external memory unit, a connecting unit for connecting the external memory unit to the main body of the portable telephone, and a control unit. The control unit can memorize information such as a mail in either one of the internal memory unit and the external memory unit, transfer information memorized in either one of the internal memory unit and the external memory unit to the other, and display an information memory territory for each piece of information, when the external memory unit is connected to the connecting unit.